CASE STUDY

Heart of Los Angeles Scales Up to Offer a Hand Up

In neighborhoods often overrun by poverty, crime, and a feeling of hopelessness, Heart of Los Angeles (HOLA) invests in youth to build stronger communities. HOLA provides some of the city's most vulnerable youth with exceptional programs in academics, arts, and athletics.

HOLA has achieved measurable results by tracking the success of each student. Not only do HOLA students matriculate to the next grade level with notable achievements in language arts, math, and science, but over the past three years, 98% of HOLA's seniors graduated from high school and over 95% are now attending college.

At a Glance

Heart of Los Angeles was founded 25 years ago with just a handful of kids in a dilapidated gym.

Today, HOLA serves over 2,300 youth, ages 6 to 24, in a safe and supportive environment on a four-building campus in and around LaFayette Park.

To learn more about HOLA, check out www.heartofla.org.
